If the Clarendon growers of tobacco are wise they will take a special interest in their county warehouses, because, the taking away of their product to other markets tends to weaken their position in the Manning market. They build up at home what is needed to protect their interests. So do not fail to patronize your home market. Of course when we thus advise, we take it for granted the prices will be as good as elsewhere. The fact of the matter is we think our buyers here can afford to give a little more because their expenses are not so great. Bring your tobacco to Manning, and you will be satisfied. Every merchant in this town has promised to give to the trade inducements to encourage the farmers to help make this market second to none, they are going to offer goods at cut-price prices so that when the tobacco is brought here, and our banks pay out the cash the stores will try to get as much of this money to remain by offering merchandise at prices which will encourage buying at the county seat. Bring your tobacco to Manning, and buy your goods here.

A Vet's Appreciation.

New Zion, July 17, 1914.
Dear Mr. Editor:—
Will you allow me space in your valued and much read paper to extend to the committees in charge and to the town of Manning for the kindness and hospitality shown to the few old soldiers that were present during the unveiling exercises 15th, inst, my heartfelt thanks.

JOS. W. BARROW.

A False Report.

There has repeatedly come to my ears the report, said to be generally circulated throughout the Tobacco belt, that my warehouse and the Central warehouse, managed by Messrs. Cochran and Moore, are under the same control, being run in a sort of un-arranged combine. This statement is absolutely false. I am running Clark's Warehouse and have no other warehouse interest. R. D. CLARK, Manning, July 20, 1914.

Death of Mrs. Sallie E. Broadway.

Tindal, July 17.—Mrs. Sallie E. Broadway, wife of Mr. J. W. Broadway, way, died at her home near here on Wednesday, July 15th, about 4:30. She has been in declining health for several months and her death while it seems sudden, was not unexpected. She leaves to mourn her loss, a husband, two brothers, Mr. T. H. Harvin of Sutherland Springs, Texas, and Mr. R. C. Richardson of Sutherland Springs, Texas. She also leaves six children, Mrs. Julia Harvin of Alcolu, Mrs. Louise Taylor of Columbia, and W. M. J. H. Richard and Miss Ellen of Tindal.

She was in the 68th year of her life and was a devoted Christian, and has been a member of the Baptist church for 48 years.

The funeral services which were conducted at the home by Rev. Williams, were largely attended by friends and relatives.

Water Works and Sewerage Wins.

The citizens meeting which took place Monday afternoon nominated for Commissioners of Public Works, Messrs. C. R. Sprout, T. F. Coffey and R. E. Harlee. There were quite a number of names put in nomination, and the meeting converted itself into a primary resulting in the gentlemen named receiving the majority of votes cast. Mayor A. C. Bradham was present with the plans and specifications for the waterworks, and sewerage, and upon request explained where the pipes were to be laid, and the estimated cost. The meeting was harmonious and the spirit manifested was in favor of improvements as a public necessity. Capt. W. C. Davis made a strong speech urging progress, and the abandonment of selfishness. On yesterday the election was held on both propositions and for the Commissioners of Public Works, Sprout, Coffey and Harlee being elected without opposition, and the vote on the two questions was: For Waterworks, 145, against, 123, against Sewerage, 26. The Waterworks proposition carries with it the permission to issue $30,000 bonds, and the Sewerage proposition carries with it the permission to issue $10,000 bonds. The main opposition to the sewerage appeared to be to taking over the system now owned by a private corporation.

Iseman Moses.

A marriage of much local interest was that of Miss Lucille Hattie Iseman daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Iseman of Manning and Mr. William Graham Moses, of this city, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents in Manning on Wednesday evening at 5:30 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families, a few intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The marriage ceremony was performed in front of an improvised altar of potted plants. The bride entered with her father, Mr. Simon Iseman, and was met by the groom, who was attended by his best man, Mr. A. J. Moses, a brother of the groom. The wedding march was played by Miss Edna Brockington.

The bride had no attendants save four little flower girls, Misses Nell and Armida Brunson of Greenville, Alethea Brunson of Sumter, and Sara McKelvey of Manning, who formed an aisle between their ribbons through which the bride entered. She was attired in a handsome dress of white satin trimmed with pearl passementerie and wore her hair in a diamond bar pin and lavalliere, gifts of the groom.

Following the marriage a reception was given for the bride and groom at the home of Mr. David Levi to which relatives and close friends were invited. CLARENDON'S BIG DAY.

cause; for he, at least can show his scars without shame."

The inscriptions on the monument are as apposite as they are admirable, and will be read with interest by the young and the old, the gentle and the strong. There should be a roll prepared, containing the name of every son of Clarendon who served in the Confederate army, or in the Confederate navy. This should be placed in the court house, in order that future generations could see how nobly the youth and manhood of liberty loving Clarendon responded to the call of Carolina, and followed the path of duty to the post of danger. It is a duty we owe the memory of our dead heroes, and the patriotic and praiseworthy work should be done under the auspices of the Daughters of the Confederacy, and of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

The cost would not amount to much, and I am confident it would cheerfully be paid by the public spirited people.

Some years ago my knightly comrades of the Army of Northern Virginia, Col. David W. Brailford, one of four brothers who served with credit and courage in the Confederate Army, and were severely wounded—invited me to visit Clarendon. Unfortunately I was unable to accept the valued invitation. If I had come here the attractions would have been so great and irresistible, that probably I should have remained and become a citizen of Clarendon; perhaps have had the good fortune to persuade one of the charming creatures to accompany me to Charleston, to brighten and bless my humble home. I shall have to remain unmated, and consequently unhappy. The veterans before me have a hearty, healthy look, for they have sweet fond ones to cheer and to charm them.

Clarendon not only sent her share of companies to distant and deadly fields, but her high minded and heroic sons served in many other companies.

Of the splendid organizations which rallied around the "Bonnie Blue Flag," and intrepidly fought, I recall the company commanded by Capt. William Elliott Keels, known as Co. "I" of the Second Regiment of South Carolina Volunteers; this company was present when the first shot of the war for Southern Independence was fired in Charleston harbor. After the capture of Fort Sumter the command was disbanded; the members promptly joining other organizations, with which they bravely fought.

The Manning Guards was organized early in 1861. The gallant Capt. Brown Manning was the commander of that fine and fearless company. It was known as Co. "C" of the far famed Legion, raised and commanded by the illustrious and countless Gen. Wade Hampton. There was not a braver or better company in the Army of Northern Virginia.

The "Sprott Guards" was named in honor of one of the most public-spirited and valued citizens of Clarendon. Although aged, and an invalid, he took great interest in the welfare of the true and courageous men in the army, and spent much of his means in equipping the command. It became Co. "I" of the celebrated 23rd Regiment, that served faithfully in almost every Army of the Confederacy; surrendering its few surviving members, with the remnant of the Army of Northern Virginia. The first commander of the Sprott Guards was Capt. Harry L. Benbow, who afterwards became Colonel of the 23rd Regiment. A camp of Confederate veterans has properly been named in honor of Col. Benbow, who was an accomplished and a brave officer. The company found a worthy successor to Capt. Benbow, in Capt. Henry H. Lesesne, whose promotion to Major was as merited as he was fearless and capable; as he was esteemed by the gallant men with whom he served. The third commander of the Sprott Guards was that intuitive soldier and an able officer, Capt. William J. R. Caney, who heroically made the last human sacrifice at the explosion of the "Crater," near Petersburg.

Your Friend,

CLARK'S WAREHOUSE, R. D. CLARK, Prop.

"Wheeler's Company" became Co. "C" of the fighting 6th Regiment. It worthily upheld the martial renown of Carolina on many a battle field. The genial, undaunted Maj. Capt. C. S. Land, was promoted Major for the Regiment for "distinguished gallantry on the field."

Capt. John S. Whitworth, a brave and devoted soldier, organized a company, it seems, did not remain a distinct organization throughout the war; having been absorbed in other companies. The men were fearless and good soldiers.

Clarendon and Sumter have always been closely united, both by border and in brotherhood, and the well known command, Co. "D" one of the most famous of Regiments, the Second, was composed of intrepid and determined men from Clarendon and from Sumter districts. Its Captain was the courageous and skillful John S. Richardson.

Capt. Alfred Bland's company became Co. "E" of the veteran and daring Sixth Regiment. In the ranks of this fine and dashing company were heroes from both Sumter and from Clarendon. Capt. Bland was an admirable and a gallant officer.

There was a splendid cavalry company from Clarendon in the celebrated Fifth Regiment, and it followed the flag of Hampton and of Butler on many a famous battle field. It was Co. "H" of that mounted command, and was commanded by Capt. Joseph Skinner, as brave a man as ever wielded a sabre, and his men rode as boldly to danger and to death, as did the "Immortal Six Hundred."

Some of the sons of Clarendon served in the spirited and daring Rutledge Mounted Riflemen, and in other fearless and meritorious Cavalry commands, and did their duty heroically.

It is a source of regret to me, and of course a disappointment to you, that I have not been able to do even elementary justice to the loved living and the lamented dead of Clarendon's heroes. Their names are among our proudest and most precious memories.

Throughout the warp and woof of our battle flag—which it furled in defeat, was never lowered in dishonor—there is intertwined the fame of the soldiers of Clarendon, and their life blood dyed that flag a deeper red. I touch the sacred folds of "the flag that is furled," as tenderly as a mourning mother imprints the last kiss of affection on the cheek of her dear, dead, darling child.

The women of the South have shed many tears of sorrow over the Sherry Cross of Confederacy, but with these tears of sorrow, thank God, and I say it with due reverence, there has not been one tear of shame.

Our flag was baptized in blood at Manassas, July the 21st, 1861; the blood of the flower and the pride of the South, and among the heroes who went grandly down to death that day, were gallant spirits from Clarendon. Of the number I recall Lieut. John Haynesworth, Samuel Stokes, John Rame, Gus. Richbourg and Henry Tindal; they were among the first soldiers of the South to fall fighting for her liberty. Clarendon district, long the nursery of heroes, lost hundreds of others in that memorable struggle in defence of hearth and home.

Peace to their crimson shrouds; ever honored be their memory.

How striking and familiar is your manly figure, soldier of the South. Mute and melancholy are the lips which used to express words of hope and cheer when we were weary or wounded; pale are the cheeks that once glowed with the crimson hue of health; that we so often saw wreathed in the curl of battle smoke, and pulsing is the brave breast that ever throbbled with lofty and generous emotions, until stilled in death.

Gloom enshrouded many a Southern home, and grief depressed hundreds of Southern hearts when the sad tidings came that you had fallen in the front of battle. Your name is inscribed in imperishable characters high on the scroll of Confederate fame, as fadeless as are the immortal lights, which have been likened to God's scripture, sparkling in the sky. You are hallowed in the heart of the noble women of Clarendon; your bold bearing, steadfast courage, unchilled fidelity and almost unexampled achievements, shall lovingly be remembered, tenderly recalled, and proudly be recounted as long as the recital of valiant deeds thrills the breast; and whilst patriotism is valued or liberty is desired.

"In the future some historian shall come forth both strong and wise with a love of the Republic, and the truth before his eyes. He will show the subtle causes of the war between the States. He will go back in his studies far beyond our modern dates. He will trace our hostile ideas as the miner does his lodes. He will show the different habits born of different social codes. He will show the Union river, and the picture will deplore. He will show it reunited, and made stronger than before. To show how the knife was sharpened that was ground to prune the tree; To show how the scales of justice, he will measure praise and blame. And the South will stand the verdict, and will stand it without shame."
